

Swallows at Hay Cutting

What calls them to my field of Clover
Those flashes of purple swallow?
Would insects frantic hum come over
Whirling mowing blades they follow?

Graceful swooping twin tailed marauders
On disturbed insects they descend
Imprinted with roles of predators
Yet adding joy to time I spend

